LOST

While ex-President Roosevelt is hunting big game in Africa little difficulties arise at home. Ace, Miss Roosevelt's bull terrier—her special pet—was lost. The news of his disappearance, sent to her by Theodore, jr., would have spoiled her pleasure trip abroad had not a "Lost Ad" been employed to solve the difficulty.

The superintendent of the Roosevelt estate exhausted nearly every possible means of locating the pet. As a last resort, after a lapse of about four weeks, Miss Roosevelt instructed him to renew his efforts.

An advertisement was printed in a Stamford, Conn., newspaper, and the dog was returned to Oyster Bay, there to await its mistress' home-coming.

In Washington there is no better way of having lost pets or articles returned than through a "Want Ad" in The Washington Herald. Thousands of people read The Herald every morning, and the honest finder of something lost would most likely turn at once to the first column of this page for information as to the owner.
